Ft. Wayne, Ind. – The Fort Wayne Museum of Art will host “Douglas David Paints Town and Country”, a collection of oil paintings by Indiana artist Douglas David. The show opens June 9 and runs through Aug. 10.

The show is a reflection of David’s desire to capture the natural, timeless beauty of everything he paints. “My goal is to share the unique beauty and spirit of things that are familiar and comfortable to me,” says David. The show includes his signature florals and cows as well as favorite landscapes, seascapes, and Indiana and Michigan lakes. The collection also features familiar Fort Wayne landmarks.

“We’re so pleased to be able to bring the work of one of Indiana’s favorite artists to northern Indiana,” says Sarah Aubrey, curator of American art for the museum. “The museum’s expansion and redesign in 2010 allows us to showcase more artists and work than ever before.”

The Fort Wayne Museum of Art is the second museum show for the Kokomo native and current Indianapolis resident. In addition to his first museum show at the Richmond Museum of Art, he’s had many solo shows, including the Christel DeHann Fine Art Gallery at the University of Indianapolis; the Honeywell Center in Wabash, Indiana; and Chicago’s Palette and Chisel Academy. His work also has been shown at the Indianapolis Museum of Art.

In addition to painting full time, David has shared his love for art by teaching classes throughout the Midwest and in Florida in recent years.

Show hours are Sunday, noon to 5 pm; Tuesday – Saturday, 11 am to 6 pm. For more information, visit www.fwmoa.org, or call 260-422-6467.
