FWMoA to install its largest indoor sculptural installation to date
Martin Blank’s Repose in Amber is one of the largest hot-sculpted landscapes in the world

FORT WAYNE, IND., November 20, 2018 - The Fort Wayne Museum of Art is pleased to invite members of the press to observe the installation of its largest indoor sculptural installation to date, Martin Blank’s Repose in Amber. The artist and his team of two will be on-site beginning November 26, with installation activity primarily from November 27-29. FWMoA will be scheduling interviews with the artist during this time.

Artwork Information:

- Repose in Amber is one of the largest hot-sculpted landscapes in the world.
- The artwork, an abstract reclining feminine figure from head to toe, is comprised of five separate islands that when connected reveal a woman in repose.
- Created in various tones of amber, the hot-sculpted glass elements are presented upon steel bases.
- All of the glass elements for Repose in Amber were hand-sculpted on the end of a blowpipe (200 pounds of glass at 2,000 degree heat.) No molds were involved.
- The installation in total measures approximately 9 ½ ’H X 15’W X 50’ long.
- There is a single red glass element contained within the artwork which pays homage to the aspect of Japanese perspective which holds that in a field of green moss, one fallen red leaf is sublime. Throughout the landscape there are intentional hidden objects intended to draw your eye in from the field of color and evoke notions of surprise and wonder.
- Presented in the Karl S. and Ella L. Bolander gallery of the museum, Repose in Amber is an immersive engaging and dynamic landscape that visitors can walk through and around as well as peer into and explore.
Installation Information:

- Beginning on November 26, 2018, Martin Blank and his team of two will begin the process of installing Repose in Amber at the Fort Wayne Museum of Art which will conclude November 30.
- The artwork was shipped to the Fort Wayne Museum of Art from Chicago, IL where it was part of Chicago’s historic art walk.

Historical Provenance:

- Years in the making, the artwork has historical provenance having been commissioned by real estate developer and art philanthropist Mike Kurzman for Chicago’s 120 South LaSalle Building, and included as part of Chicago’s Public Art and Architecture Tour.

Martin Blank Quotes:

- “This sculpture embodies the mirroring principle in my work: the way two juxtaposed objects relate to one another. When walking around Repose in Amber, the eye moves and flows through each object, and the negative spaces created between empty space become as powerful and potent as the actual objects themselves.”
- “The viewer can look closely at one cubic inch and find something intriguing, like the veils created from crushed glass floating inside each element, or the way the grains of color are stretched and pulled by the heat. The air bubbles captured inside are like insects in amber, trapped for eternity.”
- “I’ve expressed the continuity between the landscape and the human in Repose in Amber. My work revolves around trying to reconnect with our natural source – drawing on humanistic and naturalistic qualities, and honoring their connection.”
- “For me, great visual art is like music. All you have to do is feel it. I believe it can connect you back to the source of a simple being.”
