

John Gevers

Rooted in the Heartland of the United States, John is known both for capturing the splendor of the world and for revealing a person's essence and spirit in portrait photography.

To breathe in and out with my subjects, to get to know their motivations, and then to capture a moment that reflects their true selves defines me as both humanist and spiritualist.

It's the light within each of us that I seek to reveal in portraiture. Finding and recording that spark is the most intimate acquaintance with light a photographer can know.

The ability to see that spark in each of us is informed by observing the way light plays in the natural world. From a certain slant of light, much can be learned.

Many of the images in his book "focus", and on display in the Paradigm Gallery, are also available as signed archival giclee prints, please inquire with Paradigm Gallery staff.
