

Kristine Papillon

This book is meant to take parents and children to a magical place where each instrument has a personality and sings some of the world's most beautiful music. I have included both narrated and non-narrated versions on the CD so that you, the parent have the option to be the star and bring this story to life for your children.

I hope to inspire parents to expose children to the incredible world of music while they're young. Study after study has proven that children exposed to early music education go on to excel in life. I urge you to take your children to concerts, give them music lessons, support your school music education programs, and support your local symphony orchestras; they are the true gems of our communities. And stay tuned for our presence on stage, internet, and in your libraries as we bring Crumpet and his friends to life for children all over the world.
